

Energy Star Programs - The US Environmental Protection Agency and the US Department of Energy offer consumers, business, government and industry programs that help save energy as well as protect the environment. Appliances such as refrigerators, dishwashers and clothes washers that display the Energy Star label save on monthly utility and water bills through dramatic energy-efficiency improvements. Companies who sign voluntary agreements with the US Environmental Protection Agency are provided tools, and may qualify for free energy audits provided by the Energy & Recycling Office, to assist them with reducing energy costs in their facilities. Builders who become Energy Star Homes partners receive training and marketing assistance for their commitment to building energy efficient homes. For more information, contact the Energy & Recycling Office at (317) 232-8979 or the US Environmental Protection Agency (Energy Star Program - <http://www.energystar.gov>); phone 1-888-STAR-YES (1-888-782-7937).
